MANILA.

On the 9th instant Mr. C. Enciso, an assistant in the Almacen Luzon, was handling a revolver. when one of the cartridges exploded. The ball struck him on the right temple and carried away nearly the whole of the cranium. Death was not instantaneous, slight signs of life being noticed for some time after, and the unfortunate man was taken to the hospital, but there was of course no hope for him.

A similar case occurred the same day to a well known manufacturer in the city. About nine o'clock in the morning he went downstairs to his office. His wife, seeing that he had not returned to breakfast up to twelve o'clock and that his hat was still on the hatstand, went to call him, and found his body in front of the desk.

On the 10th instant a girl eleven years old was burnt to death. She was carrying a lamp from one house to another, when it burst, and the oil ran over her clothes. These took fire, and the child was enveloped in flames. An old woman who tried to render assistance had her hands burnt, and did not succeed in her efforts. Other persons then coming up the fire was extinguished, but the girl died from her injuries a few hours afterwards.

THE PROGRESS OF MANDALAY.

Despite the trials that Mandalay has gone through since the annexation of Upper Burmah. a correspondent writes that a walk through the city now affords ample ovidence of how it has profited by its change of rulers. The changes which have taken place in Mandalay during the year in which it has been in our possession are very great. When, on the 28th of November, 1885, our troops disembarked and marched in three columns upon the walled city, not altogether sure of the reception which awaited them, they passed along wide streets certainly, but streets full of deep ruts and pit-falls which must have been veritable quagmires but a few weeks before. Hundreds of pigs and parish dogs were doing their filthy office of scavengers in the streets and bye ways, for the people then threw out their litter and refuse upon the public thoroughfares. The Bazaars and shops were closed; and, though there were crowds here and there along the route, it was clear that the population was not nearly up to its normal strength. The main thoroughfares are now clean and well keptaleven miles of metalled road have been made they are well lighted, lamps being placed at every 30 or 40 yards; the streets are thronged with people and wheeled traffic is astonishingly great; the ravages of the flood have nearly disappeared, and to some extent those of the fire also, so far as the outer town is concerned; the people are building new pukka honses in place of the old ones of wood or mat; the value of ground for building purposes has advanced in the most amazing way, more than cent per cent; trade is flourishing, the King's Basaar being as town; the people seem to have settled down completely under their new rulers; police posts have taken the place of military picquets (a detachment of Infantry at the shore and another at Two lettuce, cabbage-1, Tak Wa; 2, Chan Tin Po; the Arrakan Pageda, on the southern road, are slone kept up), and the Civil Administration is firmly established. The city is a square of which each face is about 2,200 yards, and its area is thus 1,000 scree; the Palace enclosure is exactly 100 scres. The whole of the north-west quarter will be devoted to Civil lines, the new jail, now being built to accommodate 2,500 prisoners being in the angle formed by the junction of the north and west walls. Under the Burman Kings the people living within the walls were free from taxation, but had no residential rights; all the land was royal property, and houses were only built by special permission. The Ministers' houses are solid structures, but the mass of the buildings are nearly mat huts. Thus out of the 5.759 houses which we found existing only 134 were of brick and 192 of timber. Seven hundred or eigth hundred houses were burnt during the fires, the south-east and north-east sections suffering most. The Burman residents will all have to move outside the walls, compensation being paid to them for their houses or huts, and ground provided for them on which to build new residences in and about the town. The city thus cleared, well drained and laid out, will have ample given for parade and recreation grounds.-Rangoon Times.

> An agitation is gradually arising against the well-known predilection of Frenchmen for the chimney-pot hat, whether in its solid form or in its jack-in-the-box or Gibns style, and against inky-coloured evening dress. Some of the glasses

OLLA PODRIDA.

It has been reserved for an American correspondent-and need I add one of the fair sex? ... to discover the important fact that although the Prince of Wales is, as a rule, never in bed before 2 a.m., his usual hour for rising is 8 a.m. No one after this can truthfully assert that the Heir Apparent presumes on his position to secure for himself an abnormal amount of sleep.

The Rev. Maxwell Nicholson, when minister of an-Edinburgh parish, was called upon to marry a couple in humble life, and in the course of the ceromony he thrice asked the bridegroom whether he took "this woman" as his wedded wife, without eliciting a reply. At last the patience of the bride was fairly overtaxed, and she thus politely addressed her lord and master, in the hearing of the assembled friends, "Canna ye boo, ye brute."

A living Scotch judge, who is celebrated for his epigrammatic observations, said of a recent munificent contribution to the funds of a certain Church, that it was "the heaviest insurance against fire on record!" The late manager of a Scottish fire office, who happened to be present when the remark was made, offered the following comment-" Possibly, my Lord; but you will admit that cases occur where the promium scarcely covers the risk!"

The American papers get hold of many curious. Haphong . stories about the members of the Royal Family. The Princess of Wales, says one of them, "lately Poochow and the fine dark grow from which she greatly admired. a fine dark gray fur, which she greatly admired.
You are a sportsman, she said to her husband;
tell me what kind of fur it is, 'I don't hunt rats or mice,' he replied, 'I leave that sport to the sower-men.' And now the Princess does not like the costume as well as she did."

Prior to the expected visit of a Scotch Bishop at a country house in Fife, the hostess gave very special instructions to her "buttons" as to the "when you take hot water to his lordship's bedroom, you will knock at the door, and the bishop will probably say, 'Who's there P' on which you will at once reply. 'The boy, my lord.'" The poor lad undertook to do his best, but got a little "mixed" before the anticipated event cocurred. On going to the bed-room (which adjoined that of the hos(ess), he duly knocked, but in answer to the question, "Who's there?" he unfortunately replied, "The Lord, my boy."

Upwards of twenty years ago, Sir Noel Paton was residing at Windsor with his family, painting a series of pictures for the Queen. Un one occasion her Majesty, while in the studio, noticed one of Sir Neel's sons—a boy of about six years of age-and on asking him to kiss her, the little fellow firmly declined. "Why not?" said the Queen. "Because you killed our Queen Mary." "Oh. no," her Majesty replied; "the Queen who killed your Queen Mary lived about three hundred years ago." "No," said the javenile; "you are the Queen of England, and the Queen of England killed our Queen Mary." A few days afterwards, when her Majesty made a similar request, it was forthwith complied with. "Why to-day ?" said the Queen. In the most consequential tone, the young hopeful replied, "It has all been explained."

Fresch measures for the expulsion of Jews have been adopted in some of the northern provinces in Russia. The mayors in the Government of Lublin have been instructed by the Minister of Finance to conduct across the frontier all foreign Jewish merchants who are not authorised to live in Russia. The Jews in the Governments of Courland, Livonia, have also been threatened with expulsion. Residence in these three Governments is forbidden to Jews by paragraph 17 of the Regulations relating to passports, but the authorities have always allowed the prohibition to remain in abeyance. The Jews in Reval have received formal notice to quit the town, but as the result of steps taken by the Jewish community, the Governor has consented to allow all those Jews to remain who were settled there before April 1883.
